PRESENTS SPEAKER BILL ACHESON

Nonverbal Communication "The Hidden Message"

In face-to-face communication, body language accounts for more than two thirds of the impact of your message. It is always more emotionally revealing and more emotionally accurate than what you say.

Learn how your appearance, posture, gestures, facial expression, eye contact, and voice impact your face-to-face communication. Special attention is given to gender differences and how they may account for misunderstanding.

- For more than 20 years, Bill has been a faculty member of the Department of Communication at the University of Pittsburgh.
- Find out what corporations, such as Bayer, Wells Fargo and the National Football League have already discovered.
- It's not just what you say, it's how you say it.
